

The Séance: Josh Tessier and Devanny Pinn

Potential questions for a sitting. The Séance is HorrorMeet's sit-down show: horror fans at the table with the people who make independent horror. Hosts Landon Brittain and Danny Alamy. About 90 minutes at the table, cut to 45. Nothing here is fixed; tell us what's in and what's out and we'll build around it.

Anything in development that isn't announced stays off the record unless you say otherwise. We'll ask before we record what's on and off limits.

Cold open (the first 60 seconds)

1. Devanny: a hundred-plus horror films. What's the death you're proudest of, and the one you'd take back?
2. Josh: you've been set on fire, thrown through glass and hit by cars for a living. What's the stunt that still makes your family wince?

Josh: the stunt lineage

3. Your uncle Robert Tessier was the bald heavy in The Longest Yard and Hard Times. What did he tell you about the business, and what did he get wrong?
4. Argo, 300: Rise of an Empire, G.I. Joe. What does a day on a $100 million set teach you that a $100,000 set never can, and what's the reverse?
5. You've coordinated horror: Dylan Dog, Obsessed with the Babysitter, producing Rottentail. What does real violence on a set look like compared with what the audience sees?
6. Stunt coordinator to director. What was the first thing you did on Overrun that a stunt guy would never do and a director must?
7. The Sheriff: fifteen days in Los Angeles with Tom Berenger and Mark Dacascos, then Cannes. What's the one decision that made a 15-day feature possible?
8. Where do stunt people get hurt most often, and is it ever where the audience thinks?

Devanny: the scream queen who runs the numbers

9. You were recruited off a college campus for Rock of Love and VH1's Scream Queens. How do you go from reality TV to being taken seriously in horror?
10. Susan Atkins in House of Manson, Casey Anthony for ID. Playing real people who did real harm: where's the line between portraying and excusing?
11. Linda Blair, Danny Trejo, Sid Haig, Tara Reid, Vivica A. Fox. Who taught you the most on set, and what was the lesson?
12. You started producing in 2012. What did acting in eighty films not prepare you for the first time you were the one signing the checks?

13. Distribution consultant. For a filmmaker with a finished indie horror and no deal: what's the first mistake they make, and what's the first call they should make?
14. What does a streaming deal actually pay a micro-budget horror film in 2026, and when is "free on YouTube" the smarter play?
15. You've seen a hundred horror sets. What separates the ones that finish from the ones that don't?

The two of you

16. How did you meet, and was it on a set?
17. Who's harder to work with, a partner or a stranger? Be honest, the other one's sitting right there.
18. When you watch each other's work, what do you see that nobody else does?
19. What's a film you've helped each other on that people wouldn't guess?
20. Horror in 2026 from inside the house: what's working, what's dead, and what are the two of you building toward?

Yes / no lightning round

21. Would either of you ever do a found-footage film?
22. Josh, have you ever refused a stunt?
23. Devanny, is there a death you've turned down?
24. Is practical always better than CG?
25. Would you cast each other?

The Shelf

HorrorMeet's Film Shelf lists independent horror, thriller and paranormal films free, with a link to wherever they play. If either of you has titles that should be on it, we'll put them up before the episode so viewers can watch the work.
